

https://www.ashlandsource.com/business/transformation-network-expands-presence-to-dayton-region/article_64d28c70-87a4-11e9-ab0d-b378a7888dad.html

Transformation Network expands presence to Dayton region

Special to Ashland Source Jun 5, 2019

Transformation Network is expanding into the Dayton region.

ASHLAND – Transformation Network has become a member of the southern Ohio professional and trade association, Dayton Regional Manufacturers Association (DRMA).

“We look forward to contributing our training offerings to DRMA’s educational programming and individualized consultative services to their member companies,” said Dan Phillip, President and Founder of Transformation Network.

“Our membership helps to support our expansion in this region as we become a vital resource in bringing our proven approach of raising the significance of work in the lives of families and the culture of industry in America.”

Since 1934, The Dayton Region Manufacturers Association (formerly DTMA) has been the voice for the region’s manufacturing industry. Since 1934, DRMA (formerly DTMA) has served manufacturers throughout the Dayton Region and beyond as an active advocate, effectively advancing the interests of members and associated businesses. DRMA is a catalyst of innovation, a builder of partnerships, and a champion for education to keep manufacturing in the Dayton Region moving forward. For more information, visit website: DaytonRMA.org

Recognizing 20 years of providing Jobs and transforming lives, Transformation Network is a nonprofit workforce development organization focused on improving lives, strengthening business, and building communities. Headquartered in Ashland, Ohio with additional offices in Mansfield and Clyde, Ohio, along with Clarksville, Indiana. For more information, visit website: TransformationNetwork.org.

